Commissioned by the Association of Charitable Foundations, but now available to readers throughout the voluntary sector, this book by Gareth Morgan offers one of the first detailed overviews of the actual provisions of the Charities Act 2006, explaining what the Act means in practice for charities and others working in the sector – including timescales.

Although it pays special attention to the issues for grant-making charities, the Guide covers all the main areas of the Act, and is thus relevant to charities of all kinds – in fact grant-makers have to understand the Act both for themselves and for charities they support. It offers considerably more information than many overviews of the Act, but without resorting to the minute detail of legal texts
